20 years old David was called up. A chance for him to become a real man.

Dressed in a uniform, with a machine-gun in his hands went to the firing place with his new mates. Entrenching, obstacle race were not difficult for David to do. He was a perfectly fit boy. But then it was time to play with fire.

Something he couldn't cope with. Throwing the handgrenade wasn't quite simple. He delayed too long. It exploded in his hands. David got torn apart.

There was nothing left of him. Ground not mingled with David's intestines.
