These walls seem to grow closer to us
When we speak our breath grows short
And though we know what the future holds
We wish that we will not grow old

The fields that hold our dreams
Have become so poisoned around the seams
The structure is failing
Our destiny is calling
If we are to live
Our will can't be falling now

We're falling now

So forgive my trespasses on you
Can you remember the day that we met
Or do you, just try to Forget the phrases, that passed through

It wouldn't be so selfish if you just recall the night that we met
It's getting so impossible to forget
To forget
It's getting so impossible to forget

ALL WE KNOW IS ALL WE ARE

We let you pass
To live another day
