Should people with leprosy
And a past history of psychosis
Be allowed to teach our children?
Your calls, after this

There's an old lady who washes her clothes
In the same laundromat as me
She told me of her son
And some shoes that hurt his feet

Mean little nails rose up in a bunch
And plunged into his soles
Filling dirty socks
With tiny bloody holes

It's shoes and it's feet and the end of the world
It's shoes and it's feet and the end of the world
Shoes and it's feet and the end of the world
It's shoes and it's feet and the end of the world

There's an old man who said that he came
From the same town as my dad
He told me of his house
And why it smelled so bad

Small furry creatures had crawled in the spaces
In between the walls
They died and they decayed
Well I guess that's really all

It's small furry creatures and the end of the world
It's small furry creatures and the end of the world
Small furry creatures and the end of the world
It's small furry creatures and the end of the world

There is a man who told me a story about a conspiracy
He told me how it started and what it meant to me
Doctors and lawyers and bankers and priests are Controlled by U.F.O.s, controlled by U.F.O.s

It's doctors and lawyers and the end of the world
Bankers and priests and the end of the world

It's doctors and lawyers and the end of the world
It's doctors and lawyers and the end of the world
It's bankers and priests and the end of the world
It's doctors and lawyers and the end of the

There's an old lady who washes her clothes
In the same laundromat as me
She told me of her son and some shoes
