If I crawl through the atmosphere
And steam up all your windows
I'm sorry I tried
But there's a photograph awaiting disposal
In the back of everyone's mind
We set out to destroy our backlog
I'm sorry I'm tired
I'm sorry I'm wasted
At three o'clock in the morning
I stood at your window
And made the loneliest sound I know
I'm falling asleep
I'm catching your eyes now
So, sleep can wait
I'm falling asleep
But I'm catching your eyes now again
Can we pierce the sickness
And break the moonlight that you say
It's alright it's alright
Can we find a holy land
And set up camp
You say it's alright
I'm falling asleep
I'm catching your eyes now
So, sleep can wait
I'm falling asleep
But I'm catching your eyes now again
Count these days rolling backwards
How can they take so long
But go by so fast
Something about these nights in the winter
They make me want to steal you away
And run up a tab at every hotspot
From here to the end of the line
But we'll probably end up sitting alone
Nursing five cups of coffee
And a wounded page
I'm falling asleep
I'm catching your eyes now
So, sleep can wait
I'm falling asleep
But I'm catching your eyes now again
