i caught you in the moonlight, then i lost you in sunshine. picked the right star to get after, we can leave this town tonight. so call me on the simple words i said. i've forgotten how it feels to lose your head. well, i miss you already. i know you already. i kissed you already and then i lost you, lost you, but. you, you crossed an ugly desert filled with troubles built up in your mind. you came around to save the world. well, i cannot speak with this barrel pressed between my eyes; it loosens up my tongue and i refuse to watch you leave. as the rain poured, she felt dirty so she clung to me for life. as the rain poured, i felt dirty so i clung to her for life. so call me on the simple words i said. i've forgotten how it feels to lose your head. well, i miss you already. i know you already. i kissed you already and then i lost you, lost you, but. here you crossed an ugly desert filled with troubles built up in your mind. you came around to save the world. well, i cannot speak with this barrel pressed between my eyes; it loosens up my tongue and i refuse to watch you leave. but you, you crossed an ugly desert filled with troubles built up in your mind. you came around to save my world. well, i
leave. said, i refuse to let you leave.
