this Hollywood world so pretentious every other girl got a perm or extensions but you don't even rarely wear lipstick still your beauty is a natural mystic indigenous strong cheekbone from your lineage not what the mainstream image is natural hair as your heritage but to see it without chemicals is rare as the pyramids i was coming from the gym again bumping 2pac "never call you bitch again" she crossed the street, melanin glistening felt the energy something about to show interest in a prototype eve from genesis ghetto empress Nefertiti resemblance so sweet so street and genuine real black girl i salute your existence i can see us just kickin' it building an intimate friendship more than just hittin' it down to earth like greens n cornbread she don't need no weaves or contacts not judging other girls that got that im just sayin' your the truth never doubt that cuz you got that
