when i die put my bones in an empty street to remind me of how it used to be don't write my name on a stone bring a Coleman lantern and a radio Cleveland game and two fishing poles and watch with me from the shore ghostly steel and iron ore ships coming home where i am paralyzed by the emptiness(x4) clearly iron age beasts you can tell by the rust and the chains and by the oil that they bleed the crew and crows fly the skulls and bones they fly the colors of their homes i fly the cross of the blue factory flame stitched with heavy sulphur thread/threat they ain't proud colors but they're true colors of my home
where i am paralyzed by the emptiness (x4) every mile for ten thousand miles and every year for a thousand years every night for a thousand more i hear them calling they never say to come home (x2)
