see your teeth are robed in crimson from your biting back this pain and if I had the strength for smiling you'd see that my pain looks the same and I must walk these roads to freedom cause I can hear them call my name in due time I shall return my first word will be your name then I will have the strength for smiling you will see that crimson stain turn your passion into patience there is bound to be great pain
if you can shoulder patience burden in due time I'll wear your name
