I have the courage to say I am confused(x2) why you would build all of that up to tolerate whatever will transpire in that place and I have the courage to say it is like separation, a disease you should back away how it lived so long(x2) and I vow well enough to serve them well though they produce invisible consequence you can believe the regular way of words their smallness and their trembling they are small they are treacherous when they are smallest they are treacherous and I look straight through it like a line and I have the courage to repeat it but I respect it just enough not to repeat it(x3)
