I try to find the answer as I look up above
But just the chance to figure it out, this love To never wander through the room forever, opens the door
And now I simply wish I were marooned upon a magical shore

The one to gaze at my inside
Will find me liable for these crimes of love I've been forced to hide
For some, the strange in life's real fine
For some, the strangest of lives is mine Then who's to say when they come about?

For when the very thing that caused this woe
Is sometimes better than you know

The one to gaze at my inside
Will find me liable for these crimes of love I've been
forced to hide
For some the strange in life's real fine...
