We are all tethered, we are all torn from our stations
And left here to weather that never does as it should

In somebody's house in Somebody's kitchen refrigerator
Spot somebody's picture
You've never seen and probably never will
But still, you steal

Stay in my mind; I need someone to recall
Stay as you were when you
Leaned in the light of the hall

Stop swallowing glass just to Cough up some blood for attention
Stop smiling at me as if to say
You proved me wrong and it's all ok
Well it's not

You start to choke because you hate cigarettes
Mostly you know this sometimes you forget
Like all of the sleep that you never get
Well it starts to add up like a bad debt follows you

Stay in my mind; I need someone to recall
Stay as you were when you leaned in the light of the hall
Stay still I need to know where you are Stay near; my memory fails when you're far

They march through this town like a circus parade
Ransack the gullible, set fires, get paid
And all through the streets a commotion is made
But when you look the next day
Nothing has changed here at all
