When I was a young child my daddy gave to me
the name of Siggimund Blue He wanted me to grow up so that everything written would in time come true

And I fell hitting years by chance and I recall that I walked just smiling to the stake singing sha la la

When I was a young child
my heart was on fire and the air would burst aflame flowers were growing nothing knowing could be just the same

And I loved it as I always do
and I recall that I walked
singing sha la la

Come on now my baby
Come on now my love
This could be forever
written from above

my daddy gave to me
the tales of Siggimund Blue He wanted me to know that things surely written could in time come true

And I read it emerging with each turn and when I left off the scene

I could sense in a gleam that I would surely burn burn

Come on now baby
Come on now my love
written from above
