"At Last, For You"

There's nothing in my house
Strong enough to hold me
Six inches from the ground
Strong enough to hold me
150 pounds
Long enough to stop me from breathing

There's nothing in my drawer
Strong enough to put me
Face down on the floor
Still left enough to let me
Take ten or twenty more
That's what I need to stop me from breathing

I did everything
You asked me to
I did everything
I did everything
You asked me to
I did everything
I'm dying too
At last, for you

There's nothing in my town
Sweet enough to keep me
Blundering around
Sweet enough to keep me
Ten digits on the ground
Long enough to stop me from breathing

There's nothing in my words that makes you care about me
Nothing that you've heard
In all I bear about me
Everything's absurd
In everything to stop me from breathing

I did everything
You asked me to
I did everything
I did everything

You asked me to
I did everything
I'm dying too

At last, for you
I'll do
Something right and something new
It's killing me
You'll see
This will be the last you hear from me
Nothing more
I'm off the floor
Not breathing

Maybe now and then
I'll mention this in passing
Only if and when Someone else is asking
I'll bring this up again
Only when I'm laughing and breathing

I did everything
You asked me to
I did everything
I did everything
You asked me to
I did everything
I'm dying too
At last, for you
