When living your life till it's run dry, lying on your death bed with no memories to save, when a pleasant drink and a nice smoke has sent you to an early grave

Dear brother I have never asked this much of you Could you please just take my other and show them how much I care

Hiding under the blanket behind the chair
There's something that screams this seems so unfair
But were all gona feel better tommorow
And that's a feeling that you can only borrow Just take a deep breathe Take in the air of a lifelong nightmare

(We'll just have to learn to forget about this)
I would never last a day without you But I'd do anything to take it back

We'll just have to learn to forget about this

I'm not changing my mind with the seasons
Cos winter has broken, and I'll be the first one, to lose
my head

Tie me to a broken eyelid itched with razors
My dear brother is bound up in cages, and rages
Nothing will ever get worse than this right now Because a deep breathe is out of reach somehow

We'll just have to learn to forget about this

Cos winter has broken, and I'll be the first one, to lose
my head

Because a list of difficult reasons
Just isn't enough for someone like me
For someone like me
Because I've never sold myself away to a sailor at sea

I'm not changing my mind with the seasons

Cos winter has broken, and I'll be the first one, to lose
my head

I never had a single cigarette that I didn't enjoy And all the dreams leave such a bitter taste on my tongue
Despite the smell of an old aged man, I'm young at heart
If I was to have just one more day, I'd make sure that I spent it without you
