Hƿƿ laered hine rƿƿdan
And wealdan mƿƿce
And standan fƿƿst
And fƿƿond ne forhtian.
Nƿƿ hƿƿ sceal leornian
ƿƿƿt hearde sƿƿ:
Hƿƿ raerede his cnapa
Of cilde tƿƿ menn
ƿƿƿt hƿƿ his dƿƿaƿƿ gesƿƿo.
Sƿƿ fƿƿond wƿƿs simble mid heom.
Sƿƿ fƿƿond ne reccede ege.

(He taught him to ride,
To wield a sword,
To stand strong
And show his enemy no fear.
Now he must learn
The hard truth:
That he had brought his boy
From childhood.
So that he might face his death
Like a man.

The enemy was always with them.
The enemy did not care about fear.)
