(Antony Langdon)

Antony was inspired to write this song by a memory of watching his mother put on make up, and then trying it on himself in curiosity. ("Do what you want; be what you want to beâ€¦").

Prelude (Jonny Cragg speaking):

Good afternoon and welcome. Today we celebrate the songs of two of my head parishioners, Royston and Antony Langdon. In this song, they deal candidly with themes of brotherly love and homosexuality. Turn now to page number 372, "Space is the Place".

And when you kiss your other lover
I will try to understand
And just because you're fucking him
It doesn't mean you don't love me
Do what you want, be what you want to be

Space is the place that I will go when I feel all alone
Nobody calls me on the phone and I feel all alone
Meditating in the zone, all alone
Space is the place where I will go.

And just because you kiss your brother
It doesn't mean to say you're gay
And just because you're fucking him
It doesn't mean you don't love me
Do what you want, be what you want to be

Space is the place that I will go when I fell all alone
Nobody calls me on the phone and I fell all alone
Meditating in the zone, all alone
Space is the place where I will go
