Staggered Crossing "Dancing In The Mist Of The Night"

Under the red sky of a baked half moon The grass was covered in morning dew The village streets, they looked tragic Filled with magic from the last three nights

It's pretty hard to resist it the carnival And the barroom eyes You stare into all the faces and Listen to dingy lullabyes

Checked in your ticket near Brussells The train took you to a hilltop range Stripping all inhibition Hoping to see the world inside out

You all went up to the castles
The music blaring countless ryhmes
The tapestry it looked plastic
With crushed velvet drapes hung real high

The stone creatures were staring
Through your soul with their daughnted eyes
Something stops men from caring
Traped in the wicked endless night

It's pretty hard to resist it the carnival And the barroom eyes You stare into all the faces and Listen to dingy lullabyes
