"This is a story about three little piggies. Three little piggies who never went to market, especially on a Friday afternoon when they stayed at home and let other people bring home the bacon. And they still do! But the rashers get thinner and thinner, and life's knives get sharper and sharper..."

This milchcow has given its last pound of flesh
Their coffers, once full, will be emptiness
A curse for a night time, a curse for a lifetime
Three months have gone, and six months are due-time
Threatening squeals, it's shut up and pay time
For three little piggies, wither and decay time

Happy greet, happy meat, but better happy to goodbye
time

The three months have gone, it's six months to pay
time

As we have seen the guilty have no Pride
But, their lies do lead to their own suicide.
This milchcow has given it's last pound of flesh
young coffins will fill their hearts' emptiness.

Now you have seen, I can't help but grin
My angels are coming from deep within!
Now you have heard, I can't help but grin
My demons are coming from deep within!

Die piggie, die... bye bye!
