Deep and dark are my true love's eyes
Blacker still is the winter's turning
As the sadness of parting proves
And brighter now is the lantern burning
That lightens my path to love

No fiddle tune can take the air
But I'll see her swift feet a dancing
And the swirl of her long brown hair
Her smiling face and her dark eyes glancing
As we stepped out green bonnie fair

And if my waiting prove in vain
I will pack and track ?ever taking?
And the long road relieves my pain
No gem of womankind will make me
Ere whisper loves words again.

For in drink I'll keep good company
My ears will ring with the tavern's laughter
And I'll hear not her last sweet sighs
Then who's to know in the morning after
That I long for her dear dark eyes
