How to invent a heart
When from him she was created There grows nothing but scars from a fractured bone in the image of snakes
all hearts stand alone and are yet so closely linked loneliness

Always ahead, always in front
This imbalance, this ever spinning wheel
It precedes us
We march its trail
Always ahead, always in front
One can drink another's cup of poison but his lot none may win
one act play

And then, when the thread is cut the maggots feast on the heart with no discrimination of it being empty or filled, lived or lied Never too much Never too little Always enough
verse ends
