(Lew DeWitt)

All the powder and paint that hides her sweet face
Isn't her as she really should be
She's distant and cold but under it all
She's the same girl that used to love me.

All the booze drinking men she calles her friends
Aren't the friends she used to bring home
She's not what she's been called and under it all
She's the same girl that I've always known.

She may dance too close too long
And do some things that seem wrong
Or seem hard and bad and that's what's so sad
'Cause she's soft down under it all.

All the things that she says and the way she may dress
Doesn't mean she's really gone bad
She's not really at fault and under it all
She's really quite homesick and sad.

She's not really at fault and under it all
She's really quite homesick and sad...
