

Stephen Kellogg

"You Win"

Visit "You Win" on MotoLyrics.com

When it's time to go to sleep I wonder which one I will fight
Which torment will attack on any given night
The first will come and get me and force me to believe That there really ain't a place for anyone like me

Or will it be those voices asking "why can't I succeed?" Until the indignation burns so bad, my knuckles start to bleed
And the doubt comes on like drowning, until I can't get a breath
The desire's like some heart attack that never lets me
rest

You win, you win
If it's gonna hurt this much...you win
Now I don't even care
I just wanted to be there
And the cool kids took the game away
Now I don't even want to play
You win...I hate this stuff

I slip into a party and I hope no one can tell What I'm really like or how I'm really scared as hell Somewhere, out of nowhere, my confidence comes back
And that little red caboose just starts to work that old smokestack

Ah, but I still hear these voices asking "who are you trying to be?"
And my reservations kick my ass until I have no idea
And the doubt comes on like drowning, until I can't get
a breath
The desire's like some heart attack that never lets me
rest

Visit Stephen Kellogg page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.

