

Steve Mcdonald

"The Narrow Line"

Visit "The Narrow Line" on MotoLyrics.com

We walk a lonely road, or so I have been told
That life's a lonesome journey for us all.
But here I'd like to say, somewhere along the way
We chose how we stand and how we fall.
For to walk upon this earth, there's a price I have to pay.

Walk the narrow line, walk the narrow line
Walk the narrow line, walk the narrow line

For all you do and say, and all you hope and pray
And all that you oppose and obey.
And all that you believe, and all you laugh and grieve,
Is what you have become today.
And to think the way I do, there's a price I have to pay.

Walk the narrow line, walk the narrow line
I'll walk the narrow line back home.
I'll walk until I find my truth and peace of mind
I will walk the narrow line.

Peace will come, your peace will come
When all is said and done, it's only a memory away.

For when you find your peace, and all your angers cease
Then you'll make some sense of it all.
Then the promises of truth, that shone so bright in youth
Give way to greater knowledge as they fall.
And to be truthful to myself, there's a price I have to pay.

Walk the narrow line, walk the narrow line
I'll walk the narrow line back home.
I'll walk until I find my truth and peace of mind
I'll walk the narrow line.

