In a world of winners and losers, some are used, some are the users

It's a push and shove race of trying to get ahead
In the dust of all the confusion, we make a choice, truth or illusion

Will we listen to lies or hear what the Father says

We are running in a human race
Where nobody wants to settle for second place
But we've got to run it at a different pace
'Cause the first will be last and the last will be first
At the end of the human race

In a day when values are changing
What kind of ground are we really gaining
Who are we trying to serve by going the extra mile
We can't trade the truth for the fashion
We've got to live a life of compassion
And those we touch are the prize that waits at the finish line

We are running in a human race
Where nobody wants to settle for second place
But we've got to run it at a different pace
At the end of the human race

We are running in the human race
We must run it at a different pace
'Cause we'll all meet the Father face to face
At the finish line of the human race

We are running in the human race
We must run it at a different pace
'Cause we'll all meet the Father face to face
At the finish line of the human race

We are running in a human race
Where nobody wants to settle for second place
But we've got to run it at a different pace
At the end of the human race

We are running in a human race
At the end of the human race
We are running in a human race
