I recall the words from your lips.
Your foot against my back.
The stairs against my chest.
I remember your footsteps behind me and the rest I've forgotten.

60 seconds to die.
60 seconds to say my last good bye.

There's a time for remorse and there's a time for dying.
You have no control.
This is my time to live.

1000 corners have corressed these tears.
1000 tears have comforted these cheeks.

Even under your words I've said nothing.

I've laced my lips with wire to keep the words from your ears so that the words I bleed aren't heard and that the blood I speak is unattainable.

Lets sit down and talk about you and I.
You were a child and I was one also.
But when it comes down to discussing the times,
Ive got one thing on my mind.

60 seconds to die.
60 seconds to say my last good bye.
