A planet revolves, it's the human revolution
We have no idea what's going on
Like the eye inside a hurricane (eye inside a hurricane)

Everybody's involved with their personal worth
And the weight of the world went too far, we were more
And the war of the rich and the poor
Of the new and the norm
Of the old and the young
Of the oak and the worm

Every law of nature is completely unchanging
They've been the same since the planet began
Wanting to change them to fuck up the system
It's as healthy and human as it's pointless and vain

If I think like the planets then try to understand it
Based on the fact, not the principle
Starting where it ended, ending where it started
Based on the fact, not the concept

Every physical norm is as boring as it's engaging
The existential world is as boring as it's engaging

No revolution can change your position
The end isn't different from where it began
Wanting to move from a place where you came from
It's as healthy and human as it's pointless and vain

If I think like the planets then try to understand it
Based on the fact, not the principle
Starting where it ended, ending where it started
Based on the fact, not the principle
Fusing math and physics with the double helix
Based on the fact, not the principle
Big fishes never mutate as the body's pulsing
Based on the fact, not the concept
