Is there a place in his heart for me permanently?
(Or is it just)
Or is it just another heartache for me that I refuse to see?

Evening comes and he whispers
Those pretty words he knows I wanna hear
Is it for real or just play
Where I give in, oh, and he gets his way?
Oh, tell me
Tell me what happens when the final act is over
Will he be there?

'Cause promises at night are so easily made
But they can disappear at the light of day
So I ask myself over and over
Is there a place (is there a place) in his heart for me
permanently?

The way he says "I love you"
Makes me feel so good inside
But how can he expect me to surrender in some short of time?
There just too many guys that'll break a girl's heart
And walked slowly out the door
I've had too many heartbreaks I can't stand anymore

Promises at night are so easily made
But they can disappear at the light of day
So I ask myself over and over
Is there a place (is there a place) in his heart for me
permanently?

Words that I said keep filling my head
Yet I'm reluctant to believe them Those same words in the past, they never seemed to last
More than a moment's embrace
And tenderness turns to emptiness

Promises at night are so easily made

But they can disappear at the light of day
So I ask myself over and over
Is there a place (is there a place) in his heart for me
permanently?

Promises at night are so easily made
But they can disappear at the light of day
So I ask myself over and over
Is there a place (is there a place) in his heart for me
permanently?

Promises are so easily made
They can disappear at the light of day
So I ask myself over and over
Is there a place (is there a place) in his heart for me
permanently?
