I swear now when did I become for sale as they bargain for my head and my heart. If I had the chance I'd kill this Florida sun, cause summer is tearing me apart. Now when did I become so paranoid and defensive in my own skin, looking for reasons to push everyone away.

This choir of ghosts God how they won't stop singing - "You're one of us!"

This is your heart, look what you've done yeah you've gone and misplaced it. We're looking for love, and I never knew it was gone.

We sit and wait for this pouring rain to come, it lands with criminal intent. I hope it washes my conscience clean, cause I swore I would make amends - For every failed attempt at change but its hard to look in the mirror when your own reflection is working up the courage to escape.

With your head to the ground you'll hear me coming cause I won't be gone for long.

This is your heart.
