With all the tales that I've been told
It's hard to divide black from gold
But there's always one thing I know
She'll be waiting for me
Years have come and passed me by
And I've been left to wonder why
Fate has chained me to this life
And kept her waiting on me

I was blinded by the fear of dying
Unprepared to face the light
But ain't no fear gonna change my mind
From joining her tonight
Many men will boldly fight
For what is right, but what is right?
So won't you be my guiding light
As I return tonight

Come back, gun in hand
This time with no regret
It's where my finest hour begins and where my journey
ends
Come back to the skies
Where our hearts were once entwined
Long before the dawn of time and where our souls may rest

Burning lights of cities glow as the night unfolds
But not one fool to ever know what the night beholds
Miles away, the turn of day, so bright my vision stains
With memories to follow me wherever I may lay

Come back, gun in hand
This time with no regret
It's where my finest hour begins and where my journey
ends
Come back to the skies
Where our hearts were once entwined
Long before the dawn of time and where our souls may
