This is our last December
I can still remember
Like a fading ember...

In our days of youth I still can recall
Where the moments our lives were best
But I didn't stop to wonder, I didn't realize
I knew that we'd gone too fast

You were oh so innocent, I can't tell a lie
But I knew that it just wasn't enough
Looking back I wonder if I'd opened up my mind
That I had everything, everything I'd need in love

All the memories and all the emptiness
Confusion in the first degree
Everywhere I turn I can still see your face
I'm a victim of my own destiny

This is our last December, seems like a dream
I can still remember all the days you were mine
Just like our first December, I need you more than ever
Like a fading ember in a fire so divine

Like a cry in the night, a whisper to a scream
I'm a calling but I might be too late
If you'd take but just a moment to see the other side
Of a man who's learned from his mistakes

All that I want is everything I need
I can't sleep till I know that you'll be back
But I've got a bed feeling that you've laid our love to lie
And I'm nothing more than a blast from the past

This is our last December, seems like a dream
I can still remember all the days you were mine
Just like our first December, I need you more than ever
Like a fading ember in a fire so divine

What can I do? How will you see?
I've been waiting so long to make you believe

This is our last December
I can still remember...

This is our last December, seems like a dream
I can still remember all the days you were mine
Just like our first December, I need you more than ever
Like a fading ember in a fire so divine

December
Remember
This is our last December
Feels like a fading ember...
