[Music written by Marco Kehren/DEINONYCHUS Lyrics
by Shane Davison]

Beyond these eyes, wade nightmares yet to come. My innocence is nothing but a Veil of equivocation. Only whores wear black, and offer red roses at funerals.
This opiate offered me serenity, when I was on my knees. Once it was so Beautiful. But like a dying lilac; the beauty soon turns black. I was lonely, But I'm not alone anymore. My vein rivers of pollution, injected harmony. I no Longer need such a longing kiss from your parched lips. I can reach the stars From here. Something I've never been offered before.
And your desire wanes when You have a universe to discover. And pleasures other to be had. I'm slowly dying Now, a pleasant death. I can see them coming; three birds flying across the Darkened sky, this! a murder of crows.
