Dusk emerges in cyan and azure shades slowly from the depths of the soil Stones accost the inner you Hue of blue inspires

One of stone, from the cold soil, from the soul of cone, from the flowers of mushroom

The waters heave, the evening falls
- a tone in wind's breeze Spirits of the forest and the hymn of the night enhance Dance for the last time tonight when nature calls you No words to bid a farewell Winds are calling, be open-minded to the death ahead Grant me wings - up to the stars I will soar to the sparkling dance of the night sky

One of haze, from the dusk of twilight from the sign of gale, from the spirits of ether

A bed of moss to lie down and die surrounded with beard lichen
The pond stays still
