Rents in centuries and between us
Pages torn out of my life
You say: "Also fear has it's charm"
But for whom aren't the stars lovely?

Silence brings a solitude
And pain silently sings
Touch the other side of the horizon
Because the pain is what remains

You are sad as a way of no return
You are sad as a spring poured out
Beyond the coffin of gloomy days
Eyes turned towards doom of delight

With the black oppressive prayer
Near the white licking flames
There is lost melody of a dying sun
And my sobs revive deep inside
When the tears fall down on my face
Pain buried into the mosaic of melancholy

I flounder through my memories
Too weak, wholly weary
Evil laugh, wild dreams
Burning blood, black heartbeats

The painful spots, scars in the soul
That have remained like a sword thrust into the ground
We sowed the light and pain silently sings

Silence brings a solitude
And pain silently sings
Touch the other side of the horizon
Because the pain is what remains
