Narrative fear.

A fever is dancing in stride - metronome memory.

Hypocrisy here is painting a portrait that's dripping with crass composition.

Fumbled trust, the father is dead, cathedrals are burning.

Lies fuel fires, fear burns red.

Now I'm cold, is this over?

Going inside of our, going inside of our heads.

When we whisper, "Danger, danger," pull the lever,
turn the page

and I burn better in the morning.

Heartlessness narratives. Christ, where'd you go?

Impassioned, abandoned. Why, you were wrong.

This will die out.

We've forgotten how to read, we've forgotten how to believe.

The text has gone dark, the author recedes.
