We used to be the beginning and the end
Not a footnote that you suspend
When will I ever find my own
To be the melody in someone else's song

I should have known 'cause I almost had it right
Now left in the middle of the night
Waiting for my blessing from above
I'm hopelessly in love

Stoplights blinking on and on
The moon shines brighter than the sun
I can't tell where I belong
If I belong at all

Good times just beyond the hill
But heartbreak is bad enough to kill
So you decide to just stand still and time fades away

How am I supposed to read your mind?
How am I supposed to even try?
How am I supposed to say what I had to say
When you shy away, when you shy, shy away.

Stoplights blinking on and on
The moon shines brighter than the sun
I can't tell where I belong
If I belong at all

Cliche's just don't have the thrill
Empty promises just don't pay the bill
I'll take that leap, I will Come along with me

How am I supposed to read your mind?
How am I supposed to even try?
How am I supposed to say what I had to say
When you shy away, when you shy, shy away.

Stoplights blinking on and on
The moon shines brighter than the sun

I can't tell where I belong
Where do I belong?

How am I supposed to read your mind?
How am I supposed to even try?
How am I supposed to say what I had to say
When you shy away, when you shy
How am I supposed to read your mind?
How am I supposed to even try?
How am I supposed to say that I love you baby,
When you shy away, when you shy, shy away.

We used to be the beginning and the end
