I tried to break the ice
(but the words melted in my mouth)
But now I'm drowning in what I should have said
And it's too late to pull myself out
It's too late to pull myself out
The anchor in my thoughts, searches for the stable
ground
The pressure only builds, as I sink further down
How much longer must I suffer
Till my breath will expire
The water will fill my lungs
Only then can I escape her Hesitate your eyes (but your eyes complicate your gaze)
But now I'm changing, it's the same old story
Wash it away
[repeat a lot]
Untie this rubber band from around our ankles
If you don't want me to stay
Because the harder it is to escape you
The further I walk away
I'm closing the door, but leaving it unlocked
The anchor in my thoughts, searches for the stable
The pressure only builds, as I sink further down
The anchor in my thoughts, searches for the stable
The pressure only builds, as I sink further down
How much longer must I suffer
Till my breath will expire
The water will fill my lungs
Only then can I escape her
