To say I'm romantic
Would be quite semantically true
But make-believe passion
Has fallen from fashion's milieu

It's understandable
Why we're a little confused
It's asking for trouble just watching
The 6 o'clock news

But for a moment, all things aside
Look to yourself somewhere inside

Look to your dreams
Don't they still seem worthwhile?
Don't they still seem in style?
Aren't you glad they're still there?

Look to your dreams
There's a need for them now
When the world has us down
Aren't you glad they're around?

Once conceived, once believed
Fantasy's reality's childhood
And like a seed, visions need constant care
Like a child would, we should

Look to our dreams
We can still make the stars
We can still break the bars
We have built here on earth

Look to your dreams and tomorrow may be
Better for you and me
The future may say, blame blind yesterday
For taking dreams away
They could mean more than they seem

Once conceived, once believed
Fantasy's reality's childhood
And like a seed, visions need constant care

Like a child would, we should

Look to our dreams

We can still make the stars

We can still break the bars

We have built here on earth

Look to your dreams and tomorrow may be

Better for you and me

The future may say, blame blind yesterday

For taking dreams away

They could mean more than they seem
