Well I've been at the top of a cliff and seen ships go sailing away
And I've watched the sea turn green and bright blue fish swim in the shade I've imagined skies in reverse and head stormy mountains collide
And I was there by the shore on the night when the stars all married the tide

When the time arrives
When we must form a line
Would you stand and take my side Would you take my side?

No I won't be afraid
You know I won't be afraid
When the evening takes all of the colours out of my day
And the morning is as far as it will ever be away

And now we've journeyed through the world as if our dreams were an ocean to wade Under kites they glide like a friendship set on a wave

And maybe I'm afraid of fools the children that are saved
And maybe I'm not certain when they draw the final curtain
The woman in the water and the baby in the bath
And the morning is as far as it could be away
