I told you, "Life's not fair, at least wait awhile.
It's not as easy and fun."
I watched you sink right in a bottle of wine.
It must've seemed like I could die.
And I was fine and then turned down all the lights
And I could barely stand.
Coloring the lines with my proper hand.
Let me push away.?

And I'll hold out waiting here for you.
And drown our words out.
I couldn't make it passed those eyes.
I think I feel it like a wind.?
Sometimes, I wish we'd try to begin.

No one's gonna need you more.

I've got mine. Moving cross the country
I lost track of time.
Trying to make a name for myself.
'Cause every lonely heart can use an honest song
To sing along to.

The house (?) I've been dying to make
And the gold that God didn't take.
I'll hold out waiting here for you.
And drown our words out.
I couldn't make it passed those eyes.
I think I feel it like a wind.
Sometimes, I wish we'd try to begin

No one's gonna need you more...
No one's gonna need...

Fine, I try, but we're falling back to sin
Those nights you were keeping me in skin
No one's gonna need you more
No one's gonna need you
I hope you listen, I need forgiveness
And we both can't deal with it all
And I know, either way I will reach you

Either way I was wrong
If not for this end, we'd both wishing
I was right there with you at all.
And I know either way I am see-through
Either way I'm not strong
I was staring out to things I don't want to face
I need back inside your veins, and I was dying out
