it was half past dawn on the country road in the heart of the summer and i was so damn shy i just watched the sky as you laid me down in the field full of rhy seventeen and i've never seen never seen anything like you and your hair was melting in the morning sun olivia whats going on chrous:

hey,hey good luck good luck olivia
hey,hey good luck good luck olivia
hey,hey good luck good luck olivia

And the way i'd feel in my spanish heels walking up from the station with my head flung back and my shoulders tanned you were queen of the street or something equally grand

you said the boys that you take on home only fancied you sister, and they only ever loved you for your tits and thighs lit another cigarette and laughed till you cried

chrous:

olivia you know it gets lonely sometimes
