Infatuated with the corpse
An exact image of what it was just a moment ago
A ball gag suppresses the last breath that it ever took My body is bathed in the warmth of blood Never thought that it would Have kept me warm on this very fateful night But now I know that those screams were not of pain but they were my ecstasy
It's white skin is illuminated under pale moonlight Reminiscent of fresh snowfall
The patterns formed by shadows and it's hair make each square inch unique My lips still burn from the last time that I uttered it's proper name
Those thin wrists seem to melt in my hands
My flesh on it's flesh with gravity on my side
I should, but wont, tread lightly on it My garments lay in shreds with the last of my humanity Brushing the hair from it's face I am locked into a dead stare
It's open pupils act as a mirror and they a reflecting back at me
Not who I am but, what I have become I pledge allegiance to this husk, giving it all that I've got Pushing my power in
And absorbing it's life as mine, becoming one with it
I unclasp the ball gag and inhale it's death
