The times they are changing but it's really the same old thing

Now all the species are fading fast and it's the blue bird's last chance to sing

And that we don't have to surrender, let those scumbags and let them have their way

And it's really worse than that but we have already had a terrible day

Did you hear about the polar bears are in trouble they're out walking on thin ice?

No more blue whales I guess that's really not too nice

And remember that cute girl she came to town and became a junkie so quick?

She hangs out at a clinic and she's always looking sick She had big dreams once but they all sort of melted away

Now she's just hanging around trying to make it day to day

Hey and the rainforests are all gone, I guess that's kinda' sad

Weather keeps changing, that's not good, it's rather bad

Black horned rhinos seem like old long lost friends

Silver back gorillas are right near their end

Illnesses that could have been cured by plants are now all long gone

Still the darkest hour is the one before the dawn

And we're all working hard, right above minimum wage Waiting for fifteen minutes and a friendly stage

Mr. President looks serious, I guess we need some more wars

The FOX news lady says we got old issues to score Momma's watching TV and praying there's no knock on the door

A patriot for his country, warnings that he chose to ignore

Smug politicians and movie stars all pose so tragically hip
Rearranging furniture on this sinking ship
