Late one night with my head in a blaze
I woke to find a man in a sorry state
Staring through the glass
It was crystal clear
And the stranger cried out
What am I doing
I'll be damned, you brought the muscle
And held out for how wrong I've been
Staggered to the corner for a shot of the room
I'm shaking at the thought
What am I doing here

My dreams haunt me in my sleep
They stay hidden inside of me
Very deep so I'll be sure to stay
I've got direction in my craze
To keep trying for another day
Who needs perception anyway

Three long weeks I stayed in the room
Waiting for the man to show me something new
Staring through the glass
It was crystal clear
But the stranger just cried, ahh
So late one night with my head in a blaze
I said to the man in the sorry state
Love is for the lucky
You know what they want
Or maybe love's best left to who cares less

My dreams haunt me in my sleep
They stay hidden inside of me
Very deep so I'll be sure to stay
I've got direction in my craze
To keep trying for another day
Who needs perception anyway

My dreams haunt me in my sleep
They stay hidden inside of me
Very deep so I'll be sure to stay
I've got direction in my craze
To keep trying for another day

Who needs perception anyway

I've got perfection in my craze
To stay sleeping while they're awake
Who needs connection anyway
