Biding my time, letting tensions climb,
till every word strains to sound right.
Hoping for more than a life of keeping score and having to be right.
I feel like the love is all but used up in my heart, in my heart.

And if you believe in anything, would it keep you safe
here?
And if you could see through anyone, who would you
hold near?

Burnt out and bored of the scene that's been rehearsed
so many times before.
Sharp tongue so wry, sell the laugh and the lie sounds sweeter to so many more.
I know the hope is all but used up in your heart, in your heart.

And if you believe in anything, would it keep you safe
here?
And if you could see through anyone, who would you
hold near?

Open up my holidays with the feeling it's better if you weren't here with me. Understand that nobody is wrong, hope we have enough to carry on.

And if you believe in anything, would it keep you safe
here?
And if you could see through anyone, who would you
hold near?

And if you believe in anything, would it keep you safe
here?
And if you could see through anyone, who would you
hold near?
