I had a big fat line and a dozen beers,
and this crazy little devil's whisperin' in my hear,
'bout the six-foot blonde with the steel-blue eyes,
who says she likes her men just about my size,
I look to the left and I look to the right,
But my guardian angel is nowhere in sight,
All I got's the devil and he's whisperin' to me,
"Don't you just love what you see?"

Where's my angel?
Where's my angel?
I've come thousand miles,
And big blonde smiles,
I'm lookin' for my angel,
She's standin' far too close to me,
Where's my angel?

I get a nudge in the ribs and an all-knowing wink, from a friend who believes tha he knows what I think,
and She's tellin' now that her boyfriend's in jail,
and nobody here's gonna tattle-tale, and my devil man tells me to take the big leap,
what the eyes don't see, the heart can't weep,
She says that she's horny and I guess I am too,
What in hell am I gonna do?

Where's my angel?
Where's my angel?
I've come thousand miles,
And big blonde smiles,
I'm lookin' for my angel,
She's standin' far too close to me,
Where's my angel?

Now there's my angel,
Leanin' up at the bar,
Says, "Do what You want,
You done come this far, and I can't really see,
What the fuss is about,
So dig deep in your pocket,
'cause this is your shout,
You've never listened to me,

Or any that I've said,
So get a beer for yourself and a whisky for me
And take that young woman to bed!"

I get back from the bar, ali primed for the hit,
But it seems to that the blonde chick's split,
I look all around and all I can see,
Is the devil and the angel and they are laughin' at me,
I look to the left and I look to the right ,
But the belle of the ball is nowhere in sight,
I've missed my chance
