Each day i wake up facing a waiter smiling at the foot of my bed the silver tray's set but no morning delight just these things running all through my head i don't want the answers don't' want to feel at all too much time spent asking questions so I guess what I'm saying's, so long now that i'm outside watching the sunrise i'm not sure i'm still half asleep but i made up my mind to move on without you and it makes all the difference to me i don't' need the drama i don't need it at all too much time spent solving problems
rather than thinking i'm going climbing over the walls of my mind blinking my eyelids the sky fills with violets so good to be inspired
