I used to drive 500 miles to meet you in Arizona.
Used to call you late at night,
and talk under the blankets.

I wouldn't share you with anyone, you were my secret.
but now you're gone and frankly, I still don't believe it.

I would go anywhere to find you
I would search everywhere to find you but I'm afraid heavens too far away

I have no doubt that where you are is somewhere I could never follow I feel you as I lay outside But especially in the spring time

I see the darkness all around inside my very soul
I fear that where you've gone my soul will never go

I would go anywhere to find you
I would search everywhere to find you
I would go anywhere to find you
I would search everywhere to find you

Remember wringing out that silly coat of yours?
You looked like heaven knows but I saw in the shadow of your halo why do you always go where I can't follow you?
they'd never let me through

My heart was never as pure as yours

I would go anywhere to find you
I would search everywhere to find you
I would go anywhere to find you
I would search everywhere to find you

But I'm afraid heavens too far I'm afraid heavens too far away
