Pray for them
I often loose track
So I took a drag
of my first cigarette and I found my head Roll down the dumps
of twenty seventh street

I drew a sketch
with lipstick and sidewalk
of Newports edge Legoblock cliffs and an ocean that doesn't deserve the sounds of silence I'd swear on a dead artists grave

I found a spot
where the drunk never got to
And it rocks me gently silent, silent
If I never surface
then it doesn't matter
Hold my breath
It's silent, silent, now

Diligent
Escape by the water
Not sick of it
It only gets harder That's no excuse to block all the cliches and

reason for kicks

He strokes her hair
both sitting on sand and her shoulders bare nothing to demand of them
laying back on a lonely stone wall and passersby look passed it all

I found a spot
where the drunk never got to

And it rocks me gently silent, silent
If I never surface
then it doesn't matter
Hold my breath
It's silent, silent

[guitar solo]

I found a spot
where the drunk never got to
It rocks me gently silent, silent
If I never surface
then it doesn't matter
Hold my breath
It's silent, silent, now
