Oh hello my mourning dove
THE sunshine sends HER song to greet me
All my heart had lent to love
Has now returned to me completely

Her smile of me a martyr's made and I am sweetly slain.
And at the very sight of her all my gray skies roll away.
For her grace, I'll give each kiss a name
And I'll give each touch a voice to say...

Oh hello my mourning dove
The sunshine sends her song to greet me
All my heart had lent to love
Has now returned to me completely

Oh, how I love her so...

With her faintest touch a tempest crush has laden love upon me.
Because hers are the only arms whose embrace so tenderly disarms me.
For her grace, I'll give each kiss a name
And I'll give each touch a voice to say...

When she's away my heart and song so yearn
To serenade her sweet return by singing...
