The broken bone, oh you know it goes into the cast
The broken bottle is just now all broken glass
The broken toy now makes no one laugh
And those broken promises, no they don't come to pass

The broken wheel, no those spokes won't turn
No the broken candle can't burn
The broken stove leaves one hungry and cold
And the broken stone? Oh you know it don't roll

But dawn can break night and make it day
And sunlight can make storm clouds fade away
The brightest diamonds can be made from lumps of broken coal
And the broken heart can be made whole

Yeah. Oh yeah. Oh yeah.

Those broken bells? No they won't ring today.
No the broken piano won't play
The oak's broken branches can't grow
No, and the broken motor just don't go

Broken down all along that lonesome road Broken back underneath that heavy load broke, bust, but you do what you must When you all worked so hard to build, has just turned to dust

But dawn can break night and make it day
And sunlight can make storm clouds fade away
The brightest diamonds can be made from lumps of
broken coal
And the broken heart can be made whole

Yeah. Yeah. Yeah. Yeah. Oh!

But dawn can break night and make it day
And sunlight can make storm clouds fade away
The brightest diamonds can be made from lumps of
broken coal

And the broken heart can be made whole

Dawn can break night and make it day
And sunlight can make storm clouds fade away
The brightest diamonds can be made from lumps of
broken coal
And the broken heart can be made whole

Yeah. Yeah. Oh yeah.
